eyes, after two hours of back-aching work, safely stowed away under his bed and a couple of opium-lounges, and he then found time to tell me how he had dropped asleep.

He had gone out, he said, about eleven o'clock, for a stroll in the neighbourhood, accompanied only by his little German friend Herr Mauser. When on his way back, up the lane running parallel to his own, he had noticed the strange equipage I have described above, lumbering along, under the escort of two Europeans, too unostentatiously for honest intent. He had challenged, and received a reply that sounded something like Viel Truender! whereupon Herr Mauser at a little piece of land over the heads of the presumed Italian Banditti, and they had hastily decamped, leaving their booty in the hands of my friend, who promptly took possession of it in the name of the King and himself—but principally of himself.

All would have gone well and merrily, would it not have been for a rough estimate, something like 17,000 Taels, had not an inquisitive and inconsiderate patrol from the Provost-Marshal's department, in search of headquarters in that part of the city, decided upon his "diggings" as the most suitable place for their purpose. In spite of his protests, installed themselves therein, ultimately discovering his board, which they turned over to Captain B. the Provost-Marshal, who, in his turn, threw it into the general treasure-pool to which his daily seizures of loot were constantly adding. Thus vanished my friend's cleverly, if not hardly-gained treasure.

Soon after the transaction in bullion, we parted company, I going up to Peking as the guest of the 12th Baluchis, while he eluded to join the German college under von Hake, since his knowledge of German gained him many friendships and much good copy.

After the relief of the Legations I saw little of him, but I know that he passed his time with the small German parties which were clearing out the towers and villages of the South-East of the capital, and that, when he was not so engaged, he was attending the Legation auction-sales of loot, at which, with every cent that he could earn, beg, borrow or steal, he purchased furs and curios at prices which tickled his Semitic soul to the core.

The next thing that I heard of him was that he was down with fever in the German Military Hospital and there I visited him several times, for he was very ill indeed, made worse, I fancy, because he was debarred from attending his beloved auction-sales, and brooded over the thought of lost bargain.

Shortly after I returned to Japan, having made him promise to come to me, when he should be able, and recuperate in his old haunts.

A month later he turned up with all his impedimenta, of which there were several cart-loads, coming straight to my house, which, upon my arrival home to lunch, presented the appearance of a travelling Opera Company having taken possession of it as a baggage godown.

He looked very ill, but his naturally explosive cheerfulness gave his party face the lie direct, particularly when he recounted for my benefit the amazing and questionable adventures of a certain Catholic Archbishop and himself towards the close of the campaign.

After lunch I looked over my watch to see if it were time to return to my post-prandial toil, and finding it had stopped—I was sitting with my back to the clock. I asked him the time.

TRIED MANY THINGS WITHOUT BENEFIT UNTIL I TOOK CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE.
Mr. F. E. Lewis, 49, Bridge Street Row, Chelsea, writes:—Just a line in favour of "Clarke's Blood Mixture." I had suffered for seven years, and tried many things, without benefit until I took your remedy. After eight bottles I was quite well again. Please accept this letter as a token of gratitude to your "Blood Mixture," which is a genuine agent cannot be too highly estimated, since it cleanses and clears the blood from all impurities, and restores it to its normal condition. This is a good testimonial from the "Family Doctor," the popular medical world will read with interest to say: "It is certainly the finest blood purifier that science and skill have brought to light, and we can with the utmost confidence recommend it to our patients and public generally."

"IMPURETIES IN THE BLOOD."—We have seen hosts of letters from all sorts and conditions of people, in which the writers acknowledge the benefit they have received from Clarke's Blood Mixture, which is a genuine agent cannot be too highly estimated, since it cleanses and clears the blood from all impurities, and restores it to its normal condition. This is a good testimonial from the "Family Doctor," the popular medical world will read with interest to say: "It is certainly the finest blood purifier that science and skill have brought to light, and we can with the utmost confidence recommend it to our patients and public generally."
